had a national reputation. Later it passed into the hands of W. A. H. Loveland, at the time one of the foremost business men of Colorado and the leading Democrat of the State. Then it passed into the control of a syndicate, the chief of which was its late managing editor, Col. John Arkins, who made it an excellent newspaper and a profitable property. It was never, however, quite a rapport with its party, and lacked many of the elements of popularity. The rank and file of the Democratic party was suspicious of it, without reason, as the writer has cause to know. With the advent of Mr. Patterson in the control all suspicions will be dissipated. Like the mist before the morning sun they will disappear. Mr. Patterson's Democracy is unquestioned. On many an occasion did he lead the forforn hope of Democracy to certain defeat, but once, and always with ability and honor. He made a gallant fight always, and was elected to Congress in 1876, being the first Congressman from the State. That he made a favorable impression in the House is demonstrated by the fact that his genial manners, fine presence, eloquence and ability are still spoken of by the old-timers in and attaches of that body. He possesses a ready and able pen and the quick perception so essential to successful newspaper work. He will make a great paper of the News and we wish him the most abundant success.
